Be Tomorrow’s Tax Talent

EY’s Young Tax Professional of the Year is an international competition designed to identify young talents with an interest in tax, help them enhance their skills and develop their careers. The competition gives participants the opportunity to share experiences with people from a range of backgrounds and cultures.

How the competition works
There will be a local competition, a national competition followed by an international competition. The competition will test the reasoning and expressive ability of the participants.

Local and national competition
The competition is open to all penultimate and final year business and law students studying undergraduate or postgraduate courses. Selected candidates will be invited to semi-final in Hong Kong on 8 March 2014. Local final will be held in Hong Kong on 3 or 4 April 2014.

1st and 2nd prize winners of the local competition will represent Hong Kong to attend the national competition, which will be held in Shanghai in mid April 2014. The 1st prize winner of the national competition will represent Greater China to attend the international competition.

International competition
The international competition will take place in Europe around November to December 2014.
